Prepare To Be Global Citizen

National and multinational employers, business leaders, investors, entrepreneurs, and corporate managers are frustrated by graduates' lack of suitability for employment; to them many graduates lack the transferable skills necessary in the fast-moving global economy, as well as the need for employers to respect value of their qualifications. Another constraint is that some graduates are holding qualifications that lack labour demand. Employers are now insisting that all learning programmes should be structured to precisely tally with areas needed to improve graduate employability with expected robust transferable skills capacity.
